

DONATE
NOW!SUBSCRIBE
TODAY

Winter Fund Drive

Please support the Indy today!

THE INDYPENDENT

a FREE PAPER for FREE PEOPLE

SEARCH

HAD ENOUGH: Residents of 159 Stanton St. protest outside their building. Photo: Steven Wishnia.

LOCAL

Attrition by Demolition

Due to tenant pressure, the city is starting to take harassment by construction more seriously

BY STEVEN WISHNIA
FEBRUARY 21, 2017
ISSUE #222

I recognized Steve Croman from his mug shot," a Lower East Side woman said after encountering her landlord in the hallway of her building on Jan. 24. He immediately turned to shine his cell-phone flashlight in her face to blur the pictures she was taking.

The owner was in the building, 159 Stanton Street, because city Department of Buildings inspectors had issued two orders that all construction work there had to stop immediately — one, because the superintendent had refused to grant them access to the vacant apartments the day before, and one citing "illegal activity — tenant harassment."

"It's a big win," says Sherief Gaber, an Urban Justice Center lawyer representing the tenants in a lawsuit they filed against Croman in December. "It's a good sign that the Department of Buildings is taking construction as harassment seriously."

Croman, who owns more than 150 buildings in Manhattan, is the poster boy for "construction as harassment," the increasingly common landlord tactic of trying to drive out rent-stabilized tenants by renovating vacant apartments in a way that makes their lives miserable. If they move out, their apartments can also be renovated and rented out for thousands of dollars more. He is facing a civil lawsuit by state Attorney General Eric Schneiderman for harassing tenants, and criminal charges alleging that he scammed banks into giving him loans by claiming he was getting tenants out and raising rents faster than he actually was.

Croman bought 159 Stanton Street in 2013 and began gutting the vacant apartments in the summer of 2015. His workers ripped out windows, walls and floorboards. One woman's ceiling collapsed, and a cracked pipe leaked sewage all over one man's kitchen. Meanwhile, Croman minions aggressively and repeatedly offered tenants money to leave. But the work stopped that fall, leaving eight apartments empty, some with zippered plastic sheets instead of doors.

THE INDYPENDENT ISSUE 222
Feb 21 - Mar 14, 2017

SOON TO BE DEPORTED?

DOWNLOAD ISSUE

DEMAND THE IMPOSSIBLE!
BILL AYERS

SEE MORE OF MNN THAN EVER BEFORE.

HD
MNN
AMPLIFIED
LOCAL VOICES
TIME WARNER CABLE
CHANNEL 1993
STREAMING WORLDWIDE ON MNN.ORG

Listen to podcasts from
The Independent!

The Independent e-news
Get the Indy in your inbox!

E-mail *

Subscribe

Previous issues

Steve Croman, poster child for construction harassment, as seen in this photograph taken while in police custody in May. Source: NYPD.

Construction as harassment has become a major issue in the city over the last decade. The East Village and Lower East Side have been hit hardest, with landlords like Croman, Ben Shaoul, Raphael Toledano and Stone Street Properties using it as a business model. In one deal, Shaoul bought seven East Fourth Street buildings in 2010 and 2011 for $25 million and, after clearing out most of the rent-stabilized tenants, sold them to Jared Kushner, Donald Trump's son-in-law, in 2013 for $49 million. While Kushner has used construction as harassment in some buildings, most notoriously 170 East 2nd Street, he generally prefers to buy properties after other owners "have done the dirty work," as one Fourth Street tenant put it in January.

Now, it "is a citywide pattern," says Rolando Guzman of the St. Nicks Alliance in northern Brooklyn. "Over the past five years, it has become a trend." The group first received complaints about it from tenants in Williamsburg and Greenpoint, but is now seeing it more in Bushwick, and has heard about it in Ridgewood, East New York and Sunset Park.

"As neighborhoods become hotter, there's more pressure for rent-stabilized tenants to be pushed out," he says.

In January, more than 100 people attended meetings in Manhattan and Brooklyn about construction as harassment. They were organized by Stand for Tenant Safety, a coalition of more than 20 housing, neighborhood and legal services organizations, and borough presidents Gale Brewer and Eric Adams.

The coalition is backing a package of 12 bills in the City Council intended to reduce construction as harassment. They include measures that would require the Buildings Department to do a full inspection before allowing construction in a building that's partially occupied; increase fines for violations and enable the city to put liens on property when owners don't pay them; and concentrate enforcement on buildings, owners and contractors with a history of violations.

The bills were introduced in the fall of 2015, with sponsors including Antonio Reynoso of Brooklyn and Ben Kallos and Margaret Chin of Manhattan. The Council has held hearings on seven of them, the most recent last April, and taken no action on the others.

"Stand for Tenant Safety is calling on Jumaane Williams and [Council Speaker] Melissa Mark-Viverito to pass the bills," says Rolando Guzman.

Williams, who chairs the Council's Housing Committee, "is in continued discussion with the Speaker and sponsors of the bills on the package," a spokesperson told The Independent.

RELATED:

Home Sweet Home: Low-Income Residents Win Right to a Lawyer in Housing Court — Lauren Kaori Gurley

The Trump administration loves 'alternative facts' and hates a free press. Your backing keeps us strong. Become a subscriber or a monthly sustainer today and show your support for independent media.

RESPONSE TO YOUR ARTICLE

Someone who kno... - 02/22/2017 - 9:18am

Please if you are going to bash someone at least tell the truth. If the doors were left with only zippers than why could the DOB inspectors walk right into the vacant apts? You said the super would not let the inspector in? So that's a lie! In addition you failed to mention the remaining tenants wanted to be bought out for $300k each and when the landlord said no, the remaining tenants started becoming difficult! Construction is not illegal and monitored be the DOB in any occupied situation construction is and can be disruptive but when the improvements are done everyone including rent stabilized tenants enjoy the common area upgrades

REPLY

UPPER WEST SIDE CROMAN FRAUD

Dr Jeffrey Winston - 02/23/2017 - 1:27pm

I live in a rent stabilized Crimean bld. He submitted fraudulent plans to Dept of buildings stating the building was vacant when in fact 6 families remained. The lead dust and collaplaosed ceilings and storage of dangerous solvents contributed to my present cancer diagnosis. Who do I see about this? He will be fined and attorneys will reap the benefits and the team ants who suffer will receive nada. Put him in jail with Sheldon Silver in Madoffs cell

REPLY

I STAND BY MY STORY

Steve W. - 02/23/2017 - 1:23pm

Thank you for your "alternative facts." I stand by my story. Both the Department of Buildings and tenants in the building told me inspectors were not allowed in to the vacant apartments. That was one of the reasons the department issued a stop-work order Jan. 23-24. Tenants have told me the buyouts they were offered were more in the range of $4,000. They're being "difficult," they've told me, because they've had to put up with collapsing ceilings, sewage leaks, and intimidation. And while construction is legal, you need a permit--in October 2015, the Buildings Dept. issued a violation for work without one at 159 Stanton. Also, one of the reasons owners like Croman can get away with "construction as harassment" is that the city doesn't have the resources to enforce the laws thoroughly.

REPLY

THANK YOU FOR THIS STORY

Tenant - 02/23/2017 - 2:57pm

Thank you, many of us in NYC now realize that we should pressure the City to pass the Stand for Tenant Safety laws! This story reflects my experience, and you have shared where to get help!

REPLY

YOUR NAME

SUBJECT

COMMENT *

By submitting this form, you accept the Mollom privacy policy.

Save

Preview

- Donate

Subscribe

Advertise

Store
- About Us

Endorsements

Awards
- Contact Us

Get Involved

Internships

Where To Get A Copy