Noted

An EVG reader shared this from earlier today... a worker attempting to scrub off a spray-painted message inside the front door of a Steve Croman-owned building on Avenue A between Seventh Street and St. Mark's Place.

The message reads, in part: "NYU frats suck," and you can see the rest.

Last month, someone spray painted "Rats > Frats" on the new Big Belly trash can nearby on the northwest corner of Avenue A and Seventh Street.

If this happened at any other building I would say this is really a terrible thing to do.....

I agree. If this happened at another residential building, I'd be mortified. With this, I can't say the same thing. Very audacious of this person. Whomever did it had some major balls. He or she could face criminal charges if found. Perhaps it was better in theory than in actual reality. But still kind of funny.

Yes it has happened also in another les building in 2015-2016 forget the year. It's a small one. Not big like in the picture shown in this article.
